On the way to the shelter of Silard, Barnes was attacked and knocked unconscious by a young bandit Dallas Genoard. Martillo associate Firo Prochainezo comes to his rescue alone taking on Dallas and his crew; While Barnes and others are unconscious, Firo switches the elixir with the contents of two bottles of liquor, which he illegally purchased for his upcoming promotion party. Dallas and his friends successfully assault and rob Barnes of his box soon after, but later losing the box on Corososo after their meeting there with the Gandor family turns sour. Ennis finds Barnes and delivers it to Silard, who devours Barnes, and then orders her to capture Dallas and his followers. As soon as she returns four men to Silard, she introduces them to an incomplete elixir of immortality in the mornings of Silard. He devours Dallas Scott's teammate and instructs the other three to bring him a box from Coragioso. Meanwhile, thieves Isaac Dian and Miria Harwent are preparing to rob the Martillo family as the last hurrah of his thieving career. Their investigation of the Martillos leads to their involvement in the promotion of the Firo party in Alveara, along with the Gandor brothers and the rest of the Martillo leaders. All mortal party members unknowingly absorb Cure-All Elixir and become complete immortal. While the party is coming, and his comrades return the box through a bloody Coraggioso raid that leaves four Gandors dead. Isaac and Miria, having left the Martillos party early, happen to stumble upon Coragioso right as the Dallas group makes their rest. They assume that the box contains dirty mafia money and successfully steal it without realizing that Dallas and his friends are the same people who attacked them earlier in the day. The theft is watched by Ennis, hidden nearby. When the Gandor brothers return to Coragioso later and discover the corpses of their men, they resent and swear revenge. Local police, led by Edward Noah, have launched an investigation which continues the following day. Isaac and Myria say goodbye to Maiza and Firo and leave in turn. As they approached Alveara, they accidentally overheard Dallas and his friends talking behind the fence of the factory lot. All three discuss revenge and, to the horror of Isaac and Miria, have a tommy gun; Assuming the men broke out of prison to take revenge on Ennis, Isaac and Myria swore to save their heroine from the wrath of Dallas. Silard arrives in Alveara and confronts Maise in full view of the other Martillo. Firo and other leaders learn that Silard killed Maisa's younger brother and many of his friends, and now intends to kill Maisa. Angry on The Name of Maiza, the leaders shoot at Silard, full of bullets; to their shock, Silard remains on his feet and reaches for Tommy's gun. Firo tries and does not harm Silard, after which Maiza orders him to find Molsa Martillo and Ronnie Schianto and warn them about the situation. Although Firo reluctantly agrees; Silard opens fire on him as he runs away, but Maiza jumps in front of the muzzle and blocks the barrage bullets with their own bodies. A helpless move, all he can do is watch As Silard mows down the rest of the leaders. Ennis attacks Firo as soon as he walks out the back door, and the two get to know each other from a fire in the granary the day before. While Ennis explains who she and Silard are for Firo, Silard explains the nature of her last two hundred years of Maise research. Dallas and two of his friends face Firo and Ennis and prepare to kill them, but the Gandor brothers arrive just in time to apprehend Dallas and his team at gunpoint. He tries to blame the death of the mafia Gandor Na Firo, but Luck Gandor shows that he and Firo are childhood friends and shoots Dallas in the head, as well as Berga and Keith along with others. Ennis' warning that they should tie up the Dallas group comes too late, and three men revive and shoot Gandorov, Firo and Ennis dead. The trio make their run down another lane but are knocked down by Isaac and Miria by Silard's car. Isaac accidentally hits Silard in the process, but Silard recovers and takes him hostage straight as Ennis rounds the corner. Silard orders her to hold the thieves hostage while he deals with Maiza, and Ennis takes Silard's knife and holds it to Isaac's throat. Silard shoots Maise in the legs, sending the capo to his knees. Ennis thanks Isaac and Mylia, turns around, and literally and figuratively supports Silard before he can absorb Maisa. Firo outsmarts the corner of the alley, shouting Maiza's name; Silard breaks the bond between him and Ennis, and she falls to the ground. Meanwhile, Edward and several other police officers arrive at the grand entrances in Alvear to investigate reports of gunfire by civilians. Isaac and Myria throw their pepper bombs at Silard, while Firo runs to Maiza and Ennis, and Ennis realizes that Firo must be immortal (much to Maisa's surprise). Randy and Pezzo light up Silard's head, giving Firo the opportunity to absorb Silard and save Ennis' life. Lane soon came across Edward, who harangues Firo for answers until Isaac and Miria intentionally draw his attention and run away. Realizing that they are costumed bot bandits after, he orders his men to take chases; As Isaac and Myria run, they distribute genoa family happiness to passers-by, deciding to keep the last of them for tickets to California, where they plan to mine gold. Maiza asks Firo to absorb it, but Firo refuses to do such things. When Ronnie, Molsa and Kanshiruru Yaguru finally arrive, they find everyone who celebrates their newfound immortality in the alley. The Gandors then whisk Dallas and the company to an abandoned warehouse, place them in separate barrels and fill the barrels with cement. Subsequently, the barrels fell into the Hudson River. Later Edward, Bill Sullivan and Donald Brown find and deal with a core group of Szilard's sponsors (including former chief Edward Weld). Back in 2002, the immortal is glad to see that the photographer believes his fairy tale.
